I might do something once I get some nice, warm under armour, or when the weather warms up. I have some targets picked out. Some old abandoned buildings and an island I'm convinced is infested with zombies.

nightops are much less frequent in the winter snow reflects light making it way easier to see. The only real way to navigate unseen in the winter is in dense woods and stuff.

First, I would like to say, I hate all of you people that post bullshit posts like, "WOOOOOOOOT first reply". We could do without that. Second, how could you people let Night Ops VII go to the 2nd page?!? Third, the serious part about Night Ops: How many of you that operate, actually live in a place with frequent enough snow for you to be unable to op? Also, what is everyones favorite winter gear?

Well seeing it is as how this night ops thread isn't going to well I'll ask a question. Whats the best way to cover your tracks in snow? I've been feeling like snooping around the area during winter for awhile and felt like going out on a good winter op. Also to reply to Santiy's question, my favorite winter gear is some good under armor, my converted painters jumpsuit and my inside out balclava. The balclava is white on side and white on the other.

The big problem with this is the weight of the unit. Your head may begin to feel like it's going to fall off after a few hours of wearing it. Also, if a light is suddenly shined into the unit, it could destroy it, as well as your vision. Speaking of which, using this as well as the monocular sacrifices all of your natural night vision. I personally don't recommend a pair of these at all.

lately i have a bunch of garbage that the garbage man want collect so i have no choice but to use public dumpsters. I decided i would use this as a lame excuse for a night op. I got in the bed of a pickup truck and drove to a construction site near my house. I previously broke the lock of the fence so i quickly gained entry. I know this is really lame but i finally understand what you guys get so excited about. It was such a rush.

Yeah monoculars are good but only for scouting out an area in the middle of the night. Don't rely on them to help you see around the opping area.

Just something to throw out...

If you live in a relatively urban area, your best friend in nightops are train tracks, preferably abandoned, since you don't want a traindude seeing you. The reason I say this is because train tracks tend to be more out of the way of things like houses, roads, and most importantly, police officers. One of the big problems that keeps this from being a really good idea are squatters. They know that train tracks are nice and safe at night, so they live there. I'm sure I don't need to tell you how this could be inconvenient, or even deadly if they are really nuts. Another problem with train tracks is that there is no light on them usually, so you will have to bring your own light, which just screams "hello world, I exist!" This is also inconvenient, as well as the fact that train tracks only go to one place, so you can't follow them all the way, but it's still good to know where they are so you have the option.

Winter can be a good time to take advantage of. Nobody goes outside because it's too cold, making it safer for you to avoid being seen.

Be sure to wear something to keep your head warm, and wear more layers if you won't be walking around keeping your body heat up so much. And be sure to leave your shoes kind of loose so you don't cut off warm blood flow to your feet.

I was recently compromised during an 'op'. It wasn't exactly an op, but the closest thing I'd done at the time. Anyone like to share stories of capture, compromise, or the like?

Train Tracks Rock dude, but sadly here in this train town all of them are always in use.

Well I was riding "my" bike down this alley. Then this dude in a truck drives up i turn off the road then he drives up the little hill and almost fucks his truck up. then dude gets out of the truck and he is like "give me back my bike" I was thinking that I could hit him with my bike lock thats hanging on a chain on my neck and then take his wallet. but I just threw down his bike ( it had 2 flat tires from trying to be so hardcore with the off road kick ass bike ) and told him "fuck your bike" and ran off between some houses and then ran off into the other alley. I saw him down the road and he was like "hay dude get over here." I took off down into the first alley and off into the woods took me 10 mins to run to safty. Now I got to steal a new bike.

Radio towers are fun, but remember don't screw around with the little building, they have sensors on them, and if you don't call up the company to tell them you are around, they might come check it out. Of course, if this is 3 AM, they just as easily might not.
